

Acts 15:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

Analysis

The council requires abstention from 'meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication.' These prohibitions aren't salvific requirements but practical wisdom for Jewish-Gentile fellowship. Three relate to food laws (idolatry, blood, strangling), one to sexual morality. The letter promises 'ye shall do well,' not 'ye shall be saved' - distinguishing justification from sanctification.

Historical Context

These restrictions addressed major cultural barriers between Jews and Gentiles. Jews considered eating blood or idol meat abominable, while sexual immorality was common in pagan culture. These minimal concessions facilitated unity.
