

Acts 16:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then came he to Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek:

Analysis

Then came he to Derbe and Lystra—Paul returns to churches planted on his first journey (Acts 14:6-20), demonstrating apostolic care for new converts. A certain disciple... named Timotheus (Τιμόθεος, Timotheos, "honoring God")—Timothy first appears here, though likely converted during Paul's earlier visit (1 Tim 1:2, "my true son in the faith").

The son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed—His mother Eunice and grandmother Lois possessed genuine faith (2 Tim 1:5). Yet his father was a Greek, creating Timothy's unique identity crisis: legally Jewish through matrilineal descent, yet uncircumcised and culturally Greek. This mixed heritage perfectly positioned him for Paul's mission to both Jews and Gentiles, embodying the gospel's transcendence of ethnic barriers while maintaining sensitivity to Jewish concerns (hence his circumcision in v. 3).

Historical Context

Written circa AD 60-62, Luke records Paul's second missionary journey (AD 49-52). Lystra, in the Roman province of Galatia (modern Turkey), was a Roman colony populated by indigenous Lycaonians, Greek settlers, and a Jewish minority. Mixed marriages between Jews and Gentiles were common in diaspora communities, though halakhically problematic. Timothy's uncircumcised status suggests his Greek father's influence dominated household religious practice.

Study Questions

1. How did Timothy's mixed heritage both complicate and enhance his effectiveness in gospel ministry?
2. What does Paul's return to Derbe and Lystra teach about the importance of follow-up discipleship versus only evangelistic outreach?
