

Acts 16:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

Analysis

And so were the churches established in the faith (αἱ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησίαι ἐστερεοῦντο τῇ πίστει)—The verb established (ἐστερεοῦντο, estereounto) means 'strengthened,' 'made firm,' or 'solidified,' from the root meaning 'solid' or 'hard.' Church health requires more than numerical growth—it demands doctrinal stability. In the faith (τῇ πίστει) refers to the body of apostolic teaching, not mere personal belief. This stability came through the Jerusalem Council's decree (Acts 15, delivered in vv. 4), which clarified gospel truth against legalistic distortion.

Increased in number daily (ἐπερίσσευνον τῷ ἀριθμῷ καθ' ἡμέραν)—Growth follows establishment in truth. The imperfect tense (ἐπερίσσευνον) indicates continuous, ongoing increase. Luke consistently notes numerical growth as evidence of God's blessing and the Spirit's power (Acts 2:47, 6:7, 9:31, 12:24). Healthy churches multiply—established believers reproduce spiritually.

Historical Context

Following the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15), Paul and Silas revisited churches in Galatia, delivering the apostolic decree that freed Gentiles from ceremonial law while upholding moral standards. This doctrinal clarity produced both internal strength and external growth, demonstrating that theological precision and evangelistic fruitfulness are allies, not enemies.

Study Questions

1. How does your church balance doctrinal depth with numerical growth—are they seen as competing or complementary?
2. What does it mean for a church to be 'established in the faith,' and how can believers contribute to this stability?
