

Acts 18:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

Analysis

'When they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment' - a symbolic act of disassociation (Nehemiah 5:13). 'Your blood be upon your own heads' placed responsibility on rejectors. 'I will go unto the Gentiles' didn't end Jewish ministry but shifted focus.

Historical Context

This pattern - synagogue preaching, Jewish rejection, Gentile focus - recurred throughout Paul's ministry. His declaration expressed prophetic judgment rather than personal abandonment.
