

Acts 19:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

Analysis

Demetrius, a silversmith—This craftsman (ἀργυροκόπος, argyrokopos, 'silver-beater') led the guild of Artemis shrine-makers. The silver shrines for Diana (ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς Ἀρτέμιδος) were miniature temples sold to pilgrims as devotional objects or votive offerings. Archaeological evidence confirms thriving idol-manufacturing in first-century Ephesus.

No small gain repeats Luke's litotes, ironically contrasting spiritual versus economic profit. The Greek ἐργασία (ergasia) means 'business' or 'profit'—Demetrius openly acknowledged that religious devotion served financial interests. Paul's preaching threatened not theology but profits, exposing how economic systems often sustain false religion.

Historical Context

The Artemision (Temple of Artemis) employed thousands in various capacities—priests, craftsmen, vendors. The month of Artemision was dedicated to festival celebrations drawing pilgrims from across the Mediterranean. Demetrius likely headed the silversmith guild, giving him considerable influence.

1. How do economic interests today sometimes masquerade as religious conviction or tradition?
2. What 'profits' might you be unconsciously protecting against gospel transformation?
