

Acts 2:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

Analysis

Joel's prophecy of the Spirit poured on 'servants' and 'handmaidens' demonstrates the New Covenant's radical egalitarianism - social status cannot limit the Spirit's distribution. The Greek 'doulois' (slaves) and 'doulais' (female slaves) shows that the lowest social classes receive the same Spirit as apostles and prophets. This contradicts worldly hierarchy, where power flows downward; in God's economy, the Spirit descends equally on all believers regardless of race, class, or gender.

Historical Context

In first-century Rome, slaves comprised up to 30% of the population, legally considered property without rights. Jewish society, while more humane, still maintained clear social stratification. That the Spirit would fall on slaves and female slaves shocked contemporary sensibilities, demonstrating the gospel's social revolutionary power.

Study Questions

1. How does the Spirit's equal distribution challenge worldly systems of privilege and hierarchy?
2. In what ways might you be limiting the Spirit's work based on cultural expectations rather than biblical truth?
