

Acts 21:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together:
for they will hear that thou art come.

Analysis

What is it therefore?—This rhetorical question reflects the Jerusalem leaders' practical concern about managing the situation Paul's arrival created. The multitude must needs come together (πάντως ἀκούσεται, pántōs akóusetai)—Literally 'they will certainly hear,' acknowledging the inevitability that Jewish Christians would learn of Paul's presence. The elders' concern wasn't Paul's guilt but managing community perceptions poisoned by false reports. This verse captures the tension between theological truth and pastoral wisdom—how to maintain gospel integrity while navigating cultural sensitivities in a transitional moment of salvation history.

Historical Context

Jerusalem housed 'many thousands' (myriades) of Jewish believers still 'zealous of the law' (Acts 21:20). News traveled quickly in the close-knit Jewish community, especially during festival seasons when the city swelled with pilgrims. The leaders faced potential riot or schism if they didn't address false accusations about Paul.
