

Acts 22:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

Analysis

What shall I do, Lord? (Τί ποιήσω, κύριε;)—Saul's response shifts from resistance to submission. The question 'what shall I do' (τί ποιήσω) expresses immediate obedience, contrasting sharply with his former persecution. Addressing Jesus as Lord (κύριε) acknowledges divine authority, fulfilling what Ananias would later call him: 'Brother Saul' (v.13). The phrase appointed for thee to do (τεταγμένα σοι ποιῆσαι) uses the perfect passive participle—God had already ordained Saul's apostolic mission before the Damascus road encounter. Paul's conversion demonstrates sovereign grace overcoming human rebellion.

Historical Context

This occurred on the Damascus road circa AD 34-35. Paul recounts this conversion story in his defense before the Jerusalem mob (Acts 22:1-21). Damascus was a major Syrian city about 135 miles northeast of Jerusalem, with significant Jewish population.

Study Questions

1. How does Saul's immediate question 'What shall I do?' challenge cultural Christianity that seeks to know Christ without radical obedience?
2. In what ways does God's 'appointed' work for you require submitting your own ambitions?
