

Acts 22:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

(And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith,)

Analysis

He spake in the Hebrew tongue (τῇ Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ)—Likely Aramaic, the common language of Palestinian Jews. Paul's linguistic choice was strategic: speaking the people's heart language (not Greek, the empire's lingua franca) immediately established his Jewish credentials and cultural authenticity.

They kept the more silence (μᾶλλον παρέσχον ἡσυχίαν)—The verb implies granting or furnishing silence, suggesting the crowd actively chose to listen rather than merely quieting down. Language creates connection; Paul's Aramaic transformed a murderous mob into an attentive audience, if only temporarily (they resumed rioting at verse 22 when he mentioned his Gentile mission).

Historical Context

Roman occupation meant most official business occurred in Latin or Greek. That Paul commanded both Aramaic (his native tongue as a Jew from Tarsus) and educated Greek (evident in his letters) shows his bicultural sophistication—able to bridge Jew and Gentile worlds.
