

Acts 22:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

Analysis

Jesus's direct command - 'Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles' - defined Paul's apostolic mission. The 'far hence' indicated both geographical distance and cultural gulf between Judaism and Gentile nations. This divine sending superseded Paul's natural preference to witness to fellow Jews, showing how God's purposes often redirect our initial inclinations toward His broader plans.

Historical Context

This Damascus road vision (around AD 35) set Paul's missionary trajectory for the next three decades. His specific commissioning to Gentiles complemented Peter's primary ministry to Jews (Galatians 2:7-8), showing how God distributes ministry assignments.
