

Acts 24:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult.

Analysis

Paul's account of being found in the temple 'purified, neither with multitude, nor with tumult' directly contradicts accusations of profaning the temple or causing sedition. The detail that 'certain Jews from Asia' instigated trouble points to the real troublemakers. Paul's peaceful temple presence for legitimate religious purposes demolishes the prosecution's case.

Historical Context

The purification ritual Paul was completing demonstrated his respect for Jewish law. The Asian Jews who stirred up the mob were Paul's real accusers, yet Tertullus conspicuously avoided mentioning them or producing them as witnesses.

1. How do you respond when peaceful, lawful activity is deliberately misrepresented as criminal or disruptive?

2. What does this teach about how the real troublemakers often accuse innocent victims of their own misconduct?
