

Acts 24:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But after two years Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, willing to shew the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

Analysis

---

Felix's replacement by Porcius Festus after 'two years' ended Paul's Caesarean custody's first phase. Felix's final act - leaving Paul bound 'willing to shew the Jews a pleasure' - epitomized political expediency over justice. This injustice, though frustrating, served God's purpose by keeping Paul in Caesarea where he would appeal to Caesar, ultimately reaching Rome as prophesied.

Historical Context

Felix was recalled to Rome in AD 60 after Jewish complaints about his corrupt administration. Leaving Paul imprisoned curried favor with Jewish leaders whom Felix needed to testify favorably about his governorship.

Study Questions

1. How do you trust God's sovereignty when justice is sacrificed for political convenience?

2. What does this teach about God's ability to use even corrupt officials' unjust actions to accomplish His purposes?
