

Acts 4:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word,

Analysis

The specific request - 'Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word' - doesn't ask for threat removal but courage to continue despite threats. The Greek 'parrhēsia' (boldness) means frank, fearless speech. They pray not for protection but proclamation, showing kingdom priorities: mission over safety. 'Thy servants' acknowledges their role as bondslaves (Greek 'douloi') - total loyalty to Master overrides fear of consequences.

Historical Context

Ancient culture valued honor and shame highly. Public speech risked ridicule and punishment. Requesting boldness acknowledged natural fear while seeking supernatural courage. This prayer pattern - not circumstances change but character transformation - marks Spirit-filled prayer.

Study Questions

1. Do your prayers prioritize mission success over personal comfort and safety?
2. How does identifying as God's 'servant' (slave) free you from fear of human threat?
