

Acts 4:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

Analysis

The assembly of 'Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest' represents Judaism's most powerful tribunal. Annas, though deposed by Rome, retained 'high priest' title and real power as patriarch of the priestly dynasty. His son-in-law Caiaphas held official position. This concentration of power confronting uneducated fishermen demonstrates David versus Goliath pattern - God exalts the humble.

Historical Context

Annas served as high priest AD 6-15 before Roman deposition. Five sons and son-in-law Caiaphas subsequently held the office, making him the power behind multiple administrations. This was the same council that condemned Jesus (John 18:13), now facing His followers. Their family monopolized the lucrative temple commerce Jesus had disrupted.

Study Questions

1. How does worldly power's concentration oppose God's kingdom, yet ultimately serve His purposes?
2. What comfort does Christ's followers facing the same council that condemned Him offer when you face hostile authority?
