

Acts 5:39

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

Analysis

Gamaliel's warning climaxes with the sobering possibility of fighting 'against God' (Greek: theomachoi). This phrase captures the futility and danger of opposing divine purposes. While Gamaliel spoke better than he knew, his logic is sound: human power cannot overthrow what God establishes. This principle comforts persecuted believers—our vindication is certain because God's purposes cannot fail. No weapon formed against God's work shall prosper.

Historical Context

The concept of fighting God appeared in Greek literature describing Titans' futile war against Zeus. Jewish theology understood opposing God's prophets as opposing God Himself. Gamaliel's warning carried weight because Pharisees believed in divine providence governing history, unlike materialistic Sadducees.
