

Acts 7:33

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

Analysis

God commands Moses to remove his sandals because of the holy ground, sanctified by divine presence. This act of removing footwear symbolized reverence, humility, and acknowledgment of unworthiness before God's holiness. The ground itself was not inherently holy but made holy by God's presence. Reformed theology emphasizes that holiness derives from God alone - objects, places, and people are holy only as God consecrates them. This command taught Moses that approaching God requires recognition of His transcendent holiness.

Historical Context

Removing shoes when approaching sacred space was common in ancient Near Eastern cultures. This practice continues in some Eastern religious traditions. For Israel, it established a pattern of reverent approach to God's presence, later formalized in tabernacle and temple worship.
