

Acts 7:60

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

Analysis

Stephen's dying prayer mirrors Christ's crucifixion prayer (Luke 23:34), demonstrating how deeply Jesus' teaching on loving enemies had transformed him. The Greek 'koimaō' (fell asleep) is Luke's euphemism for death, emphasizing Christian hope in resurrection. The phrase 'lay not this sin to their charge' uses accounting language - Stephen asks God not to 'reckon' or 'impute' this sin to his murderers. This radical forgiveness fulfills Jesus' Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5:44) and likely impacted Saul of Tarsus, who witnessed this martyrdom and later became Paul the apostle.

Historical Context

Stephen was stoned circa AD 34-35, becoming Christianity's first martyr (Greek: martys, witness). Among the witnesses holding the executioners' garments was Saul of Tarsus (Acts 7:58). The stoning occurred outside Jerusalem's walls, as Jewish law required. Stephen's martyrdom catalyzed severe persecution that scattered believers, paradoxically spreading the gospel throughout Judea and Samaria (Acts 8:1-4).
