

Acts 8:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

Analysis

Peter's severe pronouncement - 'thy money perish with thee' - is a curse upon Simon's presumption. The Greek is strong: 'may you and your money go to destruction.' Peter rebukes the fundamental error of thinking God's gift can be purchased with money. Reformed theology emphasizes grace as absolutely free and unmerited - any attempt to buy, earn, or merit salvation or spiritual gifts perverts the gospel. Peter's rebuke establishes that the Spirit is God's sovereign gift, not man's commodity. The severity warns against mercenary religion.

Historical Context

This confrontation occurred in Samaria circa AD 33-35. Peter's harsh words echo Jesus' pronouncements against those who commodify religion (Matthew 21:12-13). The early church maintained this principle against selling spiritual benefits.

Study Questions

1. Why is attempting to purchase God's gifts such a serious offense?
2. How does the free grace of God confront all forms of religious commerce?
3. In what ways do modern religious practices commodify spiritual gifts?
