

Acts 9:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

Analysis

As Saul journeyed to Damascus, 'suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven' - divine intervention at the exact moment of God's choosing. The light's supernatural origin and intensity (brighter than noonday sun, Acts 26:13) revealed God's glory. Christ's initiative in confronting Saul demonstrates sovereign grace - the persecutor didn't seek Christ, Christ sought him. Reformed theology emphasizes irresistible grace: when God calls effectually, the sinner cannot refuse. This light represented the glory of the risen, ascended Christ appearing to His chosen apostle.

Historical Context

This occurred on the road to Damascus circa AD 34-35, becoming the watershed moment in Saul's life and Christian history. Paul later counted this as his apostolic commissioning, seeing the risen Christ as the other apostles had (1 Corinthians 9:1, 15:8).

Study Questions

1. What does Christ's initiative in confronting Saul teach about sovereign grace?
2. How does this sudden divine intervention demonstrate that salvation is God's work, not man's?
3. Why was it necessary for Paul to see the risen Christ to become an apostle?
