

Amos 6:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came!

Analysis

God's woe against complacent elites: 'Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came!' The Hebrew 'ha-shan'anim be-Tsiyyon' (those at ease/complacent in Zion) and 'ha-botekim be-har Shomron' (those trusting in mount Samaria) describes false security. Zion (Jerusalem/Judah) and Samaria (capital of Israel/northern kingdom) both contained people presuming on God's protection while ignoring covenant obligations. They're 'named chief of the nations' (nequvim reshit ha-goyim)—thinking themselves superior. Verses 4-6 detail their decadent luxury while 'not grieved for the affliction of Joseph' (we-lo nehelav al-shever Yoseph)—indifferent to coming destruction. This complacent prosperity without compassion provokes judgment.

Historical Context

Both Israel and Judah enjoyed relative prosperity in the 8th century BC. The wealthy lived luxuriously, confident in their covenant status and fortified cities. They assumed temple presence and Abrahamic promises guaranteed security regardless of obedience. Amos shatters this illusion: covenant privilege without covenant faithfulness brings heightened judgment, not immunity. The elite's conspicuous consumption (ivory beds, choice meats, idle music, fine wines—6:4-6) contrasted sharply with oppression of the poor and blind indifference to impending catastrophe. Within decades, both kingdoms fell (Israel 722 BC, Judah 586 BC).

Prosperity gospel error repeats this mistake: assuming God's blessing equals approval while ignoring holiness and justice.
