

Colossians 1:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God;

Analysis

That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God. The purpose clause introduces peripatēsai (περιπατῆσαι, "to walk"), a common biblical metaphor for daily conduct. Walking "worthy" (axiōs, ἀξιώς) means conduct matching identity—living consistently with calling as God's chosen people. This isn't earning salvation but expressing it.

"Unto all pleasing" (eis pasan areskei an, εἰς πᾶσαν ἀρεσκείαν) indicates comprehensive obedience, not selective compliance. Four present participles follow, describing continuous action: bearing fruit, increasing in knowledge, being strengthened, giving thanks. These aren't sequential stages but simultaneous aspects of mature Christian life. Fruitfulness in "every good work" shows authentic faith through visible transformation.

Historical Context

Ancient ethical systems (Stoicism, Epicureanism, Platonism) sought virtue through human effort and philosophical training. Paul presents a radically different model: transformation flows from relationship with God, empowered by His Spirit, aiming at His pleasure rather than human achievement or reputation. This redirects motivation from self-improvement to God-glorification.
