

Colossians 1:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,

Analysis

We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you. Paul's thanksgiving uses eucharisteomen (εὐχαριστοῦμεν, "we give thanks"), present tense indicating continuous gratitude, not occasional sentiment. This reflects proper recognition of divine sovereignty—all spiritual blessings originate with God, not human effort or mystical achievement.

"The Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" reveals eternal Trinitarian relationship, not merely functional roles. Christ as Kyrios (Κύριος, "Lord") applies the Septuagint's divine name to Jesus, affirming deity. The present participle proseuchomenoi (προσευχόμενοι, "praying") indicates ongoing intercession, showing that pastoral care transcends physical presence through prayer.

Historical Context

Paul's thanksgiving while imprisoned demonstrates remarkable perspective—concern for doctrinal purity outweighs personal circumstances. Roman imprisonment meant severe hardship: chains, uncertainty, discomfort. Yet Paul's prison epistles (Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon) express joy and thanksgiving, modeling contentment rooted in Christ's sufficiency rather than circumstantial comfort.

Study Questions

1. What percentage of your prayers consists of thanksgiving versus petition, and what does this reveal?
2. For which believers you've never met (missionaries, persecuted Christians) do you intercede regularly?
3. How would your prayer life change if you prioritized spiritual growth over temporal circumstances?
