

Colossians 2:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;

Analysis

And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses.

Paul specifies the Gentile condition: "dead in your sins" (spiritually dead through guilt) "and the uncircumcision of your flesh" (outside covenant relationship). Physical uncircumcision symbolized spiritual alienation. The double barrier—sin and covenant exclusion—left Gentiles hopeless by human standards.

"Hath he quickened together with him" (synezōopoiēsen syn autō, συνεζωοποίησεν σὺν αὐτῷ) uses compound emphasizing corporate resurrection: made alive together with Christ. Divine power raising Christ simultaneously raised believers spiritually. "Having forgiven you all trespasses" (charisame nos panta ta paraptōmata, χαρισάμενος πάντα τὰ παραπτώματα) uses charizomai, related to charis (grace)—graciously forgiving every sin, none excepted.

Historical Context

Ephesians 2:1-5 parallels this passage, emphasizing humanity's universal spiritual death apart from Christ. Both passages stress regeneration as divine monergism—God acting alone to raise the dead, not cooperating with human effort. Dead people cannot cooperate in their resurrection; God must act unilaterally. This theological framework undergirds Reformation emphasis on salvation by grace alone through faith alone.

Study Questions

1. Do you remember your spiritual deadness before Christ, or have you minimized your pre-conversion lostness?
2. How does understanding salvation as resurrection from death affect your view of God's grace?
3. Have you truly accepted forgiveness for 'all trespasses,' or do some sins still haunt your conscience?
