

Colossians 3:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

Analysis

When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Paul shifts from present to future, completing the eschatological picture. Christ is described as "our life" (hē zōē hēmōn, ἡ ζωή ἡμῶν)—not merely life-giver but life itself. Christian existence is Christ living in believers (Galatians 2:20); He is not supplement to our life but constitutes it entirely.

"Shall appear" (phanerōthē, φανερωθῆ) anticipates the Second Coming when Christ's glory, currently veiled to unbelieving world, will be universally manifest. "Then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (tote kai hymēis syn autō phanerōthēsesthe en doxē, τότε καὶ ὑμεῖς σὺν αὐτῷ φανερωθήσεσθε ἐν δόξῃ) promises believers' glorification. Currently hidden, believers' true state will be revealed publicly when Christ returns, sharing His glory visibly and eternally.

Historical Context

Early Christianity's hope centered on Christ's return (Maranatha, "Come, Lord"). This expectation sustained persecuted believers, knowing their suffering was temporary while coming glory was eternal. The doctrine answered both Greek philosophy's escape-from-matter scheme and Jewish expectation of earthly kingdom by promising bodily resurrection into glorified existence when Christ returns visibly to establish His eternal kingdom.

Study Questions

1. How does recognizing Christ as your life affect daily identity, purpose, and priorities?
2. Does Christ's return remain vivid hope shaping present conduct, or has it become distant theological abstraction?
3. How should the promise of appearing with Christ in glory affect your response to present shame, suffering, or obscurity?
