

Daniel 1:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

Analysis

The results vindicate faith: 'at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.' God honored obedience with observable superiority—not merely equality but superior health. This demonstrates a consistent biblical principle: God's ways, though they may seem restrictive, produce better outcomes than worldly alternatives. The comparison 'than all' emphasizes complete vindication; no Babylonian-diet youth matched the Hebrew-diet group.

Historical Context

The superior health despite simple diet defied expectations in a culture valuing rich foods. This miracle was subtle—not supernatural signs but natural process producing unexpected results. God blessed their faithfulness within the created order He designed. The comparison would have been obvious to all observers, creating testimony to Yahweh's blessing on covenant faithfulness. Their success couldn't be attributed to human wisdom but divine providence.
