

Daniel 10:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And, behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.

Analysis

More divine assistance comes: 'And, behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.' The touch on Daniel's lips parallels Isaiah 6:6-7—divine enabling for speech. The description 'like the similitude of the sons of men' suggests human-like appearance (possibly the Angel of the LORD or another angel in human form). Daniel's restored speech immediately confesses continued weakness: 'my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.' The vision's weight produces sorrow (possibly from foreseeing Israel's future suffering) and physical depletion. This honest confession of weakness characterizes true spirituality—not pretending strength but acknowledging dependence on divine grace.

Historical Context

The touch on lips recalls Isaiah's commission (Isaiah 6:6-7) where a seraph touched Isaiah's mouth with hot coal, cleansing and enabling prophetic speech. This establishes biblical pattern: prophetic speech requires divine enablement, not natural eloquence. Moses claimed speech impediment (Exodus 4:10), yet God promised, 'I will be with thy mouth' (Exodus 4:12). Jeremiah protested youth and inability (Jeremiah 1:6), yet God touched his mouth (Jeremiah 1:9). The pattern emphasizes that prophetic authority comes from God, not the prophet. Daniel's confession of sorrows and weakness demonstrates that even enabling doesn't remove the burden of revelation—prophecy is weighty ministry producing grief over sin and suffering. True prophets bear emotional and physical cost.

Study Questions

1. What does the touch on lips before speech teach about prophetic words requiring divine enabling?
2. How does Daniel's confession of sorrow and weakness demonstrate genuine spiritual maturity?
3. Why does revelation produce grief and burden rather than merely empowerment or confidence?
