

Daniel 12:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

Analysis

The phrase "they that be wise" comes from the Hebrew root sakal meaning "to understand" or "to have insight." This refers not merely to intellectual knowledge but to spiritual understanding—those who comprehend God's truth and live accordingly. "Shall shine as the brightness of the firmament" uses astronomical imagery—they will radiate glory like the heavenly expanse. This echoes Matthew 13:43: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

"And they that turn many to righteousness" describes those who lead others to righteousness—evangelists, teachers, disciplers who point people to God. The causative form emphasizes active agency in others' salvation and sanctification. "As the stars for ever and ever" promises eternal glory proportional to faithfulness in leading others to God. This parallels Jesus' teaching about heavenly rewards and Paul's joy in converts as his "crown of rejoicing."

This verse teaches:

1. resurrection bodies will possess glorious, radiant qualities
2. faithful teaching and evangelism result in eternal reward
3. present suffering will be replaced by eternal glory
4. there are degrees of glory in resurrection—those who led others to righteousness receive special honor.

This points to Christ, the ultimate "Wise One" who turned "many to righteousness" through His atoning death.

Historical Context

Daniel 12:3 appears in the book's final chapter, concluding the apocalyptic vision received during Cyrus's third year (536 BC). The context is resurrection and final judgment. This is the Old Testament's clearest resurrection prophecy, anticipating New Testament fuller revelation. The promise that faithful teachers would "shine as stars forever" especially encouraged believers during persecution. Many Jews and Christians faced martyrdom for maintaining faithfulness and teaching others.
