

Daniel 2:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

Analysis

God 'changeth the times and the seasons' demonstrates sovereignty over history. Hebrew 'iddan (times) and zeman (seasons) together encompass chronological progression and appointed moments. God isn't merely eternal but actively governs temporal affairs. 'He removeth kings, and setteth up kings' directly addresses Daniel's situation under Nebuchadnezzar—even this pagan emperor rules only by divine permission. This profound political theology declares no human authority exists except by God's decree (cf. Romans 13:1). The verse's second half focuses on revelation: God 'giveth wisdom unto the wise' and 'knowledge to them that know understanding,' showing He sovereignly distributes insight.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern peoples attributed political changes to divine activity, but polytheism meant competing gods controlled different spheres. Daniel's monotheism declares one God sovereignly directs all historical developments. The rise and fall of kings—central concern for court officials—lies entirely in Yahweh's hands, not fate, astrology, or competing deities. This radical claim would be verified through Daniel's lifetime witnessing Babylonian, Median, and Persian kingdoms.

Study Questions

1. How does God's sovereignty over kings and kingdoms provide comfort when political situations seem chaotic or threatening?
2. What does God's control over 'times and seasons' teach about His purposeful direction of history toward appointed ends?
