

Daniel 3:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

Analysis

Nebuchadnezzar's amazement—"Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire?"—begins his recognition of divine intervention. The question to his counselors seeks confirmation of what he commanded, establishing baseline reality before describing the impossible. His astonishment shows even hostile authorities can recognize God's supernatural work. The repetition of details (three men, bound, into fire) emphasizes the certainty of what should have happened versus what he now observes. This question sets up the stunning declaration to follow.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern kings typically surrounded themselves with advisors who confirmed and supported royal decisions. Nebuchadnezzar's question to counselors served multiple purposes: verifying his memory, sharing his astonishment, and establishing witnesses to the miracle. Court officials present at the execution would have watched the three men thrown into the furnace, making the coming revelation even more shocking. The king's need for confirmation shows the miracle's unexpectedness—it violated all natural expectations.
