

Daniel 3:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

Analysis

The Aramaic phrase "the form of the fourth" (reviai, רְבִיעָא) literally means "the fourth one," while "is like the Son of God" (domeh l'var-elahin, דִּמְהָ לְבַר־אֱלֹהִין) can be translated "resembles a son of the gods" (pagan interpretation) or "the Son of God" (Christian interpretation). Nebuchadnezzar, speaking from a polytheistic worldview, likely meant "a divine being" or "an angel," yet the text's inspired wording points to a Christophany—a pre-incarnate appearance of Christ.

This miraculous deliverance demonstrates several profound truths:

1. God doesn't always prevent His people from entering fiery trials but walks with them through the flames
2. Christ's presence transforms suffering from destructive to redemptive
3. the fourth figure being "loose" suggests Christ liberates those bound by persecution
4. the executioners died from the fire's heat (v. 22) while the faithful walked unharmed, illustrating how God's judgments distinguish between oppressors and His people.

This account prefigures Christ's incarnation—God entering human suffering to deliver His people.

Just as the Son of God entered the furnace to save three faithful men, Christ entered humanity's flames of judgment to rescue believers from sin's condemnation.

Historical Context

Nebuchadnezzar's astonished observation came after he had the furnace heated seven times hotter than usual (v. 19)—a deliberate escalation intended to intensify their suffering. The king and his court witnessed the immediate death of the mighty soldiers who threw the three Hebrews into the furnace (v. 22), making the survival of the condemned men even more miraculous.

Ancient Babylonian theology included divine councils and hierarchies of gods, so Nebuchadnezzar's reference to "a son of the gods" reflects his polytheistic framework attempting to interpret a monotheistic miracle. However, the biblical text uses this pagan king's testimony to reveal divine truth—even unbelievers witness and acknowledge God's supernatural intervention.

Study Questions

1. How does understanding that Christ walks with believers through trials, rather than always removing them, change your perspective on current suffering?
2. How does the fourth figure's presence in the furnace illustrate Christ's promise "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5)?
