

Daniel 7:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

Analysis

Daniel's approach—"I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this"—demonstrates proper response to confusing revelation: seeking divinely provided interpretation rather than relying on human speculation. The angelic interpreter "stood by" ready to explain, indicating God provides understanding through authorized channels. Daniel's humility in asking "the truth of all this" acknowledges his need for divine explanation despite being a wise man himself.

The angel's willingness to explain—"So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things"—demonstrates God's desire to communicate clearly. Revelation isn't given to mystify but to inform and prepare God's people. The parallel phrasing "told me...made me know" emphasizes thoroughness—the angel ensures Daniel grasps the vision's meaning. This models proper prophetic interpretation: Scripture interprets Scripture, and God provides understanding through His Word and Spirit, not human ingenuity.

This passage establishes the principle that biblical prophecy contains divinely authorized interpretation, not infinite possible meanings. Daniel doesn't speculate about symbolic significance—he receives authoritative explanation from God's messenger. This warns against fanciful prophetic interpretation disconnected from biblical text and context. It points to Christ who "opened their understanding" of Scripture (Luke 24:45) and the Spirit who guides into truth (John 16:13).

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern dream interpretation relied on professional interpreters using omen texts and symbolic systems. Daniel rejects such human methodology, instead seeking divine interpretation from authorized heavenly messengers. This distinguished biblical prophecy from pagan divination—God reveals and God interprets, ensuring accuracy and preventing human manipulation.
