

Daniel 9:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.

Analysis

Daniel's study of Scripture leads to prayer: 'In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.' Daniel studied 'books' (plural, possibly Jeremiah and other prophets) understanding that Jeremiah's seventy-year prophecy (Jeremiah 25:11-12; 29:10) was nearing completion. This demonstrates that biblical prophecy isn't fatalistic—understanding God's promises led Daniel to prayer, not passive waiting. Scripture study prompted intercession for prophecy's fulfillment.

Historical Context

Jerusalem fell in 586 BC; seventy years later (516 BC) the temple was rebuilt, though debate exists whether counting from 605 BC (first deportation) reaches 539 BC (Babylon's fall) or 538 BC (Cyrus's decree allowing return). Daniel, deported in 605 BC, had lived almost the entire seventy years in exile. Jeremiah's scrolls evidently circulated among exiles (Jeremiah 29 was a letter to exiles). Daniel's access to prophetic writings shows Scripture's importance in exile for maintaining faith and hope.

Study Questions

1. How does Daniel's example teach that understanding biblical prophecy should lead to prayer rather than passive speculation?
2. What does his Scripture study during exile teach about the Bible's role sustaining faith and hope in difficult circumstances?
