

Deuteronomy 13:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

Analysis

The condition: 'When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.' Covenant blessing depends on covenant obedience—"hearken" (shama, שָׁמַע, hear/obey) and 'keep' (shamar, שָׁמַר, guard/observe) all commands. The standard: 'right in the eyes of the LORD'—divine perspective, not human judgment. This verse concludes chapter 13's warnings with positive exhortation: obedience brings blessing, disobedience brings curse. The choice remains perpetually before Israel. Faithfulness to revealed truth maintains covenant relationship; apostasy destroys it. Every generation faces this choice.

Historical Context

This conditional structure permeates Deuteronomy (Deuteronomy 28 details blessings and curses; chapter 30 offers restoration after judgment). Israel's history validated this: obedience under Joshua → conquest; apostasy under Judges → oppression; faithfulness under David/Solomon → empire; apostasy → divided kingdom → exile. The pattern proved reliable. New Testament applies this spiritually: obedience to Christ brings eternal life; rejection brings eternal judgment. The choice remains—blessing through faith or curse through unbelief.
