

Deuteronomy 15:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.

Analysis

Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto. The emphatic naton titten lo (giving, you shall give) requires actual generosity, while lo-yera levavkha (your heart shall not be grieved/grudging) demands cheerful giving. Paul quotes this principle: 'God loveth a cheerful giver' (2 Corinthians 9:7). External compliance with internal resentment perverts obedience into legalism.

The promise ki biglal hadavar hazeh yebarekh-kha YHWH (because of this thing the LORD will bless you) establishes reciprocal generosity—giving releases God's blessing. Bekhol-ma'asekha (in all your works) and bekhol-mishlakh yadekha (in all that your hand undertakes) promise comprehensive prosperity for those who give freely. Proverbs 11:24-25 observes this paradox: 'There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth.' Jesus promised: 'Give, and it shall be given unto you' (Luke 6:38). Generosity creates overflow, stinginess creates lack.

Historical Context

This command climaxes the Sabbatical year legislation (Deuteronomy 15:1-11), grounding economic ethics in covenant relationship. Ancient economies lacked social safety nets; charity came from personal/family resources. Israel's ethic of open-handed generosity distinguished them from surrounding nations. The early church's economic sharing (Acts 4:32-37) and Paul's collection for Jerusalem (2 Corinthians 8-9) demonstrate continuity with this covenantal generosity.
