

Deuteronomy 15:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

Analysis

Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household—The firstborn animal becomes a covenant meal, eaten at the central sanctuary. Worship combines sacrifice (the animal dies) and celebration (the family feasts). This dual nature foreshadows the Lord's Supper: This is my body, which is given for you (Luke 22:19)—Christ's death enables our fellowship feast.

Year by year emphasizes regularity—covenant worship is rhythmic, not sporadic. The annual pilgrimage to the place which the LORD shall choose (Jerusalem, Deuteronomy 12:5) unified Israel, preventing tribal fragmentation. Modern application: corporate worship isn't optional but essential. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together (Hebrews 10:25)—gathered worship sustains covenant identity.

Historical Context

Three annual pilgrimage festivals (Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles) brought families to Jerusalem with their firstborn offerings. These gatherings strengthened national identity, renewed covenant commitment, and created shared memories across generations, cementing Israel's unity despite tribal divisions.

Study Questions

1. How does regular, corporate worship ('year by year') shape your covenant identity more than sporadic private devotion?
2. What does the firstborn meal (combining sacrifice and celebration) teach about the Lord's Supper?
3. In what ways do you prioritize gathered worship rather than treating it as optional or inconvenient?
