

Deuteronomy 16:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Neither shalt thou set thee up any image; which the LORD thy God hateth.

Analysis

Neither shalt thou set thee up any image; which the LORD thy God hateth
—The matstsevah (מַצֵּבָה, 'standing stone, pillar') served as Canaanite memorial or cultic object. Even though Jacob erected memorial stones (Genesis 28:18, 35:14), God now forbids them in worship contexts—what served as testimony to God's appearance becomes idolatrous when venerated itself.

The verb hateth (אֶתְּנִים, sane) is rare in reference to God's emotions, emphasizing intensity. God hates idolatry not from insecurity but from covenant love—it destroys the relationship He died to create. Jesus warned: No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other (Matthew 6:24). Images divide affection; true worship demands wholehearted devotion. The second commandment's jealousy (Exodus 20:4-5) springs from passionate love, not petty anger.

Historical Context

Standing stones marked Canaanite cultic sites, often associated with Baal worship. Even legitimate memorial stones (like Jacob's at Bethel) risked becoming objects of veneration rather than pointers to God. God's prohibition prevented Israel from adopting Canaanite worship forms.

Study Questions

1. What 'images' (mental pictures of God, cultural representations, sentimental objects) might you be venerating rather than the living God?
2. How does God's 'hatred' of idolatry reflect His passionate love (covenant jealousy) rather than arbitrary pickiness?
3. What memorial objects or practices (originally honoring God) risk becoming ends in themselves rather than means to worship?
