

Deuteronomy 17:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

Analysis

That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren—The king's greatest danger: pride (בָּרָר, levav, heart lifted up). Daily Torah reading prevents this by reminding him he's a brother (אֶחָד, ach)—a fellow covenant member, not a demigod. Solomon ignored this, his wives turned away his heart after other gods (1 Kings 11:4), leading to kingdom division.

That he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left—The narrow path (Matthew 7:14). James warns leaders face the greater condemnation (James 3:1). Peter commands elders: Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock (1 Peter 5:3). Leadership doesn't exempt from obedience but intensifies accountability. To the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children—obedience ensures dynastic stability. Disobedience destroys legacies (Jeroboam, Ahab, Manasseh).

Historical Context

Saul exemplified the lifted-up heart (1 Samuel 15:17-23), presuming to alter God's commands. David, though flawed, remained 'a man after God's own heart' (Acts 13:22) through repentance (Psalm 51). Solomon's drift from Torah resulted in Israel's permanent division (1 Kings 11-12).

Study Questions

1. What leadership positions (work, ministry, family) tempt you toward pride and exempting yourself from standards you expect others to follow?
2. How does viewing yourself as a 'brother' (fellow servant) rather than 'above' others shape your leadership?
3. What legacy are you building—faithfulness that 'prolongs days' for your spiritual children, or disobedience that destroys what you've built?
