

Deuteronomy 24:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

Analysis

When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken. God mandates a one-year honeymoon period where the new husband is exempt from military and civic duties. This demonstrates divine concern for establishing strong marriages through dedicated time together.

The phrase shall be free at home one year provides extended period for the couple to bond without external pressures competing for attention. Strong marriages require investment of time and focus, which God protects by excusing obligations that would separate them.

The purpose cheer up his wife indicates the husband's responsibility to bring joy and comfort to his bride. Marriage is not merely legal contract but relationship requiring emotional investment, care, and cultivation of happiness.

This law reveals God's prioritization - establishing godly marriages takes precedence even over national defense and civic obligations. Strong families form the foundation of strong communities.

Historical Context

In agrarian and warrior societies, this exemption represented significant sacrifice by the community. Excusing newlyweds from war and civic duties redistributed their responsibilities to others.

This demonstrates Israel's community commitment to strengthening marriages, recognizing that healthy families benefit society long-term despite short-term inconvenience.
