

Deuteronomy 26:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.

Analysis

I have not eaten thereof in my mourning—the tithe wasn't consumed during ritual uncleanness associated with mourning the dead (contact with corpses caused temporary uncleanness, Numbers 19:11-22). Neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use—no portion was diverted to profane purposes or handled in ceremonially unclean states. Nor given ought thereof for the dead—prohibiting use of the tithe in pagan funeral customs or offerings to the deceased, practices common in surrounding cultures but forbidden to Israel.

These three negative declarations protected the tithe's sacred character. The prohibition on eating while mourning and giving for the dead distinguished Israelite practices from pagan death cults that venerated ancestors and made offerings to spirits. But I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me—the positive conclusion affirmed complete obedience to all tithing regulations. Holiness required both avoiding prohibited actions and performing required ones.

Historical Context

Given circa 1406 BC before Israel encountered Canaanite religious practices that heavily emphasized death cults and ancestor veneration. Archaeological evidence from Canaan shows elaborate tomb offerings and apparent belief in feeding the dead. Israel's law explicitly rejected these practices, requiring the living to care for the living (Levites, poor) rather than making offerings to the dead. The prohibition safeguarded monotheistic worship and distinguished Israel from necromantic paganism.

Study Questions

1. Why does God prohibit using sacred resources for death-related practices?
What theological truth does this protect?
2. How do modern 'offerings to the dead' (elaborate funerals while neglecting the living poor) violate this principle?
3. What's the relationship between ceremonial cleanness in the Old Testament and moral purity for Christians?
