

Deuteronomy 27:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way.
And all the people shall say, Amen.

Analysis

Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way—This curse prohibits exploiting disability or vulnerability. The Hebrew mash'geh (מַשְׁגֵּח) means to lead astray, cause to err, or mislead. While literal blindness is in view, the principle extends to any exploitation of those lacking knowledge, power, or ability to defend themselves.

Leviticus 19:14 similarly commands, "Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumblingblock before the blind." Both texts reveal God's protective concern for the vulnerable and His judgment on those who abuse power disparities. The way (הַדָּרֶת) can be physical path or metaphorical life-path—misleading the blind encompasses both causing physical harm and giving false counsel.

Jesus applied this imagery to religious leaders who were "blind guides" (Matthew 15:14, 23:16-24), leading people astray spiritually. The curse thus extends to false teachers who exploit the spiritually vulnerable through deceptive doctrine.

Historical Context

Ancient cultures often viewed disabilities as divine punishment or signs of disfavor, leading to social marginalization. Israel's law uniquely protected the disabled and vulnerable, reflecting God's character as defender of the weak (Psalm 146:8-9). The curse's placement among serious sins like idolatry and sexual immorality elevates care for the vulnerable to fundamental covenant obligation, not optional charity.
