

Deuteronomy 27:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Cursed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly. And all the people shall say, Amen.

Analysis

Cursed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly—the verb nakah (נָקַה, strikes/smites) can mean killing (as in murder) or injuring. The key term is ba-seter (בָּאֵסֶטֶר, in secret/in hiding), indicating premeditated violence done covertly to evade justice. This encompasses assassination, ambush, poisoning, or false witness leading to execution—any harm inflicted through deception rather than open confrontation.

Secret violence is particularly heinous because it perverts justice by preventing legitimate defense or legal recourse. The requirement for public 'Amen' meant the community bound itself to investigate suspicious deaths and bring hidden murderers to justice. Proverbs repeatedly condemns those who lie in wait for blood (Proverbs 1:11, 12:6), and Jesus intensified the standard by condemning even hateful anger as murder of the heart (Matthew 5:21-22).

Historical Context

Ancient Israel lacked modern forensic investigation, making secret murders difficult to solve. The law provided cities of refuge for accidental killers (Deuteronomy 19:1-13) while requiring execution for premeditated murderers. Secret violence was especially abhorrent because it denied victims the protection of Israel's justice system and showed contempt for the image of God (Genesis 9:6). This curse invoked divine investigation and judgment where human investigation failed.
