

Deuteronomy 29:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That thou shouldest enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day:

Analysis

That thou shouldest enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day. The purpose that thou shouldest enter into covenant explains why the entire nation assembles. Covenant making requires conscious, willing participation - not forced compliance but voluntary commitment.

The phrase and into his oath indicates covenant involves mutual swearing. Israel swears loyalty to God; God swears faithfulness to Israel. The oath creates binding commitment transcending mere agreement - it invokes divine witness and sanction.

That the LORD...maketh with thee emphasizes divine initiative. Though Israel participates, God authors and initiates the covenant. He sets the terms; they accept or reject but cannot negotiate different conditions.

The phrase this day creates urgency and specificity. Covenant commitment occurs at definite moment, not vague future intention. Like wedding vows, covenant requires specific decision at specific time.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern covenants regularly included oath-swearng ceremonies where parties invoked deity to witness and enforce the agreement. Breaking oaths merited divine judgment.

Israel's covenant renewal at Moab paralleled the original Sinai covenant, with each generation needing to personally ratify commitment to God.
