

Deuteronomy 30:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

Analysis

But if thine heart turn away (פִּי־יִפְנֶה לְבָבְךָ ki-yifneh levavkha)—panah means to turn or turn aside, while levav (heart) represents the inner will and affections. Apostasy begins internally before manifesting in external idolatry. So that thou wilt not hear—the Hebrew shema means not just auditory perception but covenantal obedience and allegiance. Refusing to "hear" God's voice means rejecting His authority.

Be drawn away, and worship other gods—shadach (drawn away) suggests seduction or enticement, picturing idolatry as spiritual adultery. The progression is clear: heart turns → refuses to hear → gets drawn away → worships false gods → serves them. This diagnostic sequence exposes how apostasy unfolds incrementally, beginning with subtle heart-drift long before open rebellion. Paul echoes this in Romans 1:21-25, showing the devolutionary spiral from rejecting God to idolatry to moral chaos.

Historical Context

Moses addresses the second generation on the threshold of Canaan (1406 BC), warning against the syncretism that would plague Israel throughout the conquest and monarchy periods. Canaanite fertility cults (Baal, Asherah) would prove a constant temptation, mixing Yahweh worship with pagan ritual. This warning proved tragically prophetic—Israel's persistent idolatry led to exile exactly as Moses predicted. The verse's psychological insight (heart turning precedes action) reflects Moses' pastoral wisdom.
