

Deuteronomy 30:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

Analysis

And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee. God promises to transfer the covenant curses from repentant Israel to their oppressors. Those who hate thee and persecuted thee will experience the judgment Israel endured during exile.

This demonstrates divine justice - God punishes those who afflict His people. Though He uses nations as instruments of judgment against Israel, He later judges those nations for excessive cruelty and treating His people as mere spoil.

The principle appears throughout Scripture - God promised Abraham that those who curse you I will curse (Genesis 12:3). Touching God's people invokes divine judgment on the persecutors.

This ultimate vindication encourages suffering believers - persecution is temporary, and God will repay afflicters while vindicating His people. Romans 12:19 applies this - Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

Historical Context

Babylon destroyed Jerusalem and exiled Judah, yet Babylon itself fell to Persia shortly after. Rome destroyed the temple (AD 70) yet the Roman Empire eventually crumbled while Christianity spread globally.

Throughout history, persecutors of God's people eventually face judgment while His people ultimately prevail through suffering.
