

Deuteronomy 32:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

To me belongeth vengeance, and recompence; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.

Analysis

To me belongeth vengeance, and recompence (לִּי וְעוֹשׂוֹתָם)—God claims exclusive rights to naqam (vengeance) and shillem (recompense/retribution). This isn't arbitrary wrath but covenant justice: God alone possesses perfect knowledge, righteous standards, and authority to execute judgment. Paul quotes this in Romans 12:19 and Hebrews 10:30, prohibiting personal vengeance and entrusting justice to God.

Their foot shall slide in due time—the Hebrew timmot raglam evokes unstable footing on a slippery path. The wicked appear secure but stand on treacherous ground; judgment is certain though delayed. Le-et (in due time) emphasizes God's perfect timing—neither premature nor tardy. The day of their calamity is at hand (yom 'edam qarob)—the yom (day) of disaster hastens despite apparent delay. God's patience isn't weakness but opportunity for repentance (2 Peter 3:9).

Historical Context

This verse became foundational for biblical theology of divine judgment. Ancient Near Eastern gods were often portrayed as capricious in vengeance; Israel's God executes justice according to covenant righteousness. The principle that vengeance belongs to God alone distinguishes biblical ethics from tribal honor codes requiring personal revenge. Early church fathers cited this against Christian participation in state-sanctioned violence.
