

Deuteronomy 4:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

Analysis

God 'declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments.' The equation of covenant with Decalogue reveals that the Ten Commandments function as covenant stipulations, not arbitrary rules. The Hebrew 'berit' (covenant) binds God and people in legal relationship with mutual obligations. God's initiative ('he declared...he commanded') emphasizes divine sovereignty in covenant establishment. Writing on 'two tables of stone' indicates permanence and divine authorship. From a Reformed perspective, the moral law reveals God's unchanging character and continues to guide Christian ethics, though Christ fulfills ceremonial aspects.

Historical Context

God inscribed the Ten Commandments on two stone tablets at Sinai (Exodus 31:18, 34:28). Following ancient Near Eastern treaty patterns, both tablets likely contained the full covenant text—one copy for each party (God and Israel). Moses received these tablets twice, smashing the first set after the golden calf apostasy (Exodus 32:19), then receiving replacement tablets (Exodus 34:1-4). These tablets were deposited in the Ark of the Covenant (Exodus 25:16).
