

Deuteronomy 4:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

Analysis

But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

After the storm of judgment comes the rainbow of hope. The conditional uvikkashtem (וּבִקַּשְׁתֶּם, 'if you seek') introduces the possibility of restoration even from exile. The remarkable promise umatsa'ta (וּמָצָאָה, 'thou shalt find') assures that seeking God is never futile—the God who scatters can be found by those scattered among the nations.

However, conditions apply: seeking must be bekhol levavkha uvekhol nafshekha (בְּכָל לִבְךָ וּבְכָל נַפְשְׁךָ, 'with all thy heart and with all thy soul'). This echoes the Great Commandment (Deuteronomy 6:5) and reverses the half-hearted worship that led to exile. Superficial religious observance will not suffice; God requires total, undivided devotion. The same wholehearted commitment expected in obedience is required in repentance.

Jeremiah 29:13-14 quotes this promise to the Babylonian exiles, demonstrating its ongoing relevance. The New Testament universalizes it: 'Seek, and ye shall find' (Matthew 7:7). God is not far from anyone who genuinely seeks Him (Acts 17:27), though saving faith comes through Christ alone. The seeking heart finds a seeking God who was seeking it first.

Historical Context

Despite predicting exile and judgment, Moses offers hope of restoration through wholehearted repentance. This promise was partially fulfilled when the remnant returned from Babylonian exile under Ezra and Nehemiah (538 BC onward), and continues to have theological significance for God's faithfulness to covenant promises.

Study Questions

1. What does it mean to seek God 'with all your heart and soul' rather than with partial or divided commitment?
2. How does the promise that sincere seekers will find God encourage you in seasons of spiritual distance or dryness?
