

Deuteronomy 6:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.

Analysis

The testimony concludes with purpose: 'he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.' The double movement (out/in) reveals redemption's full scope—deliverance from bondage and entrance into blessing. God didn't merely liberate from Egypt but purposed to give Canaan inheritance. The grounding 'which he sware unto our fathers' connects exodus to patriarchal promises (Genesis 12:7, 13:15, 15:18), demonstrating covenant faithfulness across generations. This verse illustrates the Reformed doctrine that redemption serves God's sovereign purposes: bringing His elect into promised rest.

Historical Context

God's oath to Abraham (Genesis 15:18-21), Isaac (Genesis 26:3), and Jacob (Genesis 28:13) promised Canaan to their descendants. The exodus fulfilled this 600-year-old promise, demonstrating God's covenant faithfulness. Israel's conquest under Joshua completed the 'bringing in' process (Joshua 21:43-45). This typifies Christian redemption: saved from sin's penalty to enter God's rest (Hebrews 4:1-11), brought from death to life, darkness to light, slavery to sonship. Salvation has both negative (deliverance) and positive (inheritance) dimensions.
