

Deuteronomy 7:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

Analysis

God's righteous judgment balances His covenant mercy. 'Repayeth them that hate him to their face' (meshalleim leson'av el-panav) means swift, direct, personal judgment. The phrase 'to their face' emphasizes that God's justice is neither delayed nor indirect—He confronts rebellion openly. 'He will not be slack' (lo ye'acher) means God doesn't procrastinate in judgment. This vindicates God's holy character—He cannot overlook sin. The Hebrew parallelism (repeating 'to their face' and 'repay') emphasizes certainty and immediacy. This is the flip side of election: those who persist in hating God receive judgment. Romans 2:5-6 affirms this principle: God 'will render to every man according to his deeds.'

Historical Context

Israel's history demonstrates this principle repeatedly. Those who 'hated' God (rebelled against His covenant) faced immediate judgment: Korah's rebellion (Numbers 16), Achan's theft (Joshua 7), Uzzah's irreverence (2 Samuel 6:7). The Canaanite nations received judgment 'to their face' through Israel's conquest. The northern kingdom's persistent idolatry led to Assyrian exile (722 BC); Judah's apostasy resulted in Babylonian captivity (586 BC). God's judgment, though patient, arrives with certainty.
