

Deuteronomy 8:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth.

Analysis

The warning against pride—'And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth'—addresses the universal temptation to attribute success to personal ability rather than divine blessing. Taking credit for God's gifts reveals prideful forgetfulness. The antidote is remembering 'it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth' (verse 18)—even ability to produce wealth comes from God. Recognizing God's ownership of all prevents arrogance and promotes stewardship perspective.

Historical Context

This warning anticipated Israel's coming prosperity in Canaan, when military victories and agricultural abundance might tempt pride. Centuries later, Nebuchadnezzar exemplified this pride ('is not this great Babylon, that I have built,' Daniel 4:30), facing immediate judgment. Jesus' parable of the rich fool (Luke 12:16-21) similarly warns against pride in wealth earned without acknowledging God. Modern prosperity gospel theology inverts Scripture—making wealth the goal rather than recognizing its danger.
